

Join ADC in Suva, Fiji for Mediation training and accreditation

Mediation provides timely, cost effective and confidential dispute resolution that is so essential to modern-day efficient businesses, governments and communities. Would you like to learn more about the mediation process? Would you like to train to be a mediator?

The Australian Disputes Centre* has been a leader in mediation training and accreditation for nearly 30 years. ADC is a not-for-profit dedicated to advancing the use of Alternative Dispute Resolution in the Asia-Pacific. ADC's Mediation Accreditation is held by many of the most respected mediators in the region and its world-class training is widely recognised and acknowledged across business, government, legal and community sectors.

ADC's comprehensive 5-day mediation training is designed and presented by the region's leading mediator trainers and coaches. The program begins with two days of interactive learning; giving you strong foundations on conflict, negotiation and the mediation process. The course builds on this knowledge over the next 3 days with our specialist 1:3 mediation coaching. This 5-day intensive program equips you with the knowledge and the skills needed to mediate in a range of dispute resolution situations. On completion of the program, you are eligible to seek ADC Mediator Accreditation and Australian National Mediator Accreditation. ADC offers you a complete assessment programme through our Mediator Accreditation Day.

During the mediation course you will:

- Discuss the nature of conflict and how it may be resolved.
- Gain a comprehensive understanding of the mediation process and its practice.
- Practice interest based negotiation and understand its use in the mediation context.
- Learn and adopt the communication skills of a mediator; assisting parties in identifying and exploring the issues, generating options for resolution and shifting impasses.
- Consider issues relating to power and cultural factors in mediation.
- Discuss the legal and ethical obligations associated with being a mediator.
